

Should Trump's faith advisory council resign?

Since several members of President Trump's business advisory council resigned en masse, multiple reporters have asked The FAMiLY LEADER President and CEO Bob Vander Plaats if Trump's faith advisory council should do the same.

In fact, Pastor A.R. Bernard has already left the council, suggesting its "advisory" capacity is little more than a "photo op."

But Vander Plaats believes the faith council, like the Prophet Nathan who once corrected a wayward King David, may yet have an important role to play in the path of this president:
